What does society look like?

If you want to know what society looks like, look at our cities: look at their distribution of spaces and artefacts; look at their scales, intensities, and densities. Look at how they curate events. Architecture & Collective Life explores the relations that bind people and environments into settlements, and settlements into civilisations. In The Politics Aristotle argued that the city has a particular form because public life has a particular form. Today, new media and digital technologies are creating new forms of association, which are shifting the locus of political life; and it is now no longer possible for Hannah Arendt, reading Aristotle, to so neatly equate the city with public life and politics. This discourse is urgent. The post-war public realm is under pressure from market-led ideologies and development practices. The damage we are doing to our environments, and the way identity politics has shifted the tenor of public debate, raise questions from seemingly opposite corners about our capacities to organise ourselves for thoughtful collective action.

We are interested in how the individual and the collective are constructed and reproduced in public and private life, at different scales and forms, in different disciplines, in different places, with the intention of keeping these categories as open as possible to different areas of thought and action. The collective does not reduce to its constituent individuals; nor does it form a unity. It is always under review. Collectives are constructed around cities, commons, language, gentrification, conflict, deviance, housing, technology, media, mercantilism, monuments, institutions, otherness, ecology, civic engagement, faith, ethics, poetics, politics, gender, labour, memory, pedagogy, state planning, migration and campfires. We are particularly keen to explore the contributions of architecture as the practice that thinks and constructs our artefactual world. We also are interested in the roles of research, the humanities, and the University – the institution with a social mandate for intellectual leadership – in building forms of collective intelligence and collective life.

If collective life is a broad classification, we use it also as a pointed tool for thinking new forms of collective. This is the challenge: how to think new ways of being together. Collective life does not directly address planning and social policy priorities; nor does it use the language in which they are written. We use collective life to redirect the flow of social political and architectural thought to new and unanticipated futures, a flow that is always collective and always historic.

The programme for Architecture & Collective Life includes contributions from architecture, geography, history, politics, philosophy, law, business, and art and design.

AHRA

The Architectural Humanities Research Association was founded to create a space for thoughtful debate about architecture and its practices. The AHRA 2019 conference will frame this debate in terms of the individual and the collective because these categories unpack the social and spatial relations that organize settlements and societies, and thereby constitute a platform for thoughtful action. The AHRA website can be found here:

<http://www.ahra-architecture.org/>

This conference is a forum for thinking out loud and in public, with the openness, commitment, interdisciplinarity, and criticality that we expect to find in the University. The message of this conference is that sustained critical inquiry into cities and its social life is very much alive and well. Humanities-oriented thinking on cities does not directly address the policy priorities that currently drive university funding for research and shapes our research environment. It anticipates them. It re-frames them. It thinks them anew.

The City of Dundee

Dundee University was home to polymathic botanist planner Patrick Geddes and humanist biologist D'Arcy Thompson. Geddes was one of the great thinkers on the city and its social forms, his thought only impeded – perhaps – by its wildly expansive nature. Thompson's collection of bio-objects remains on campus. Dundee is the Geddes' Valley Section. Situated on the Tay River Valley (big sky, howling wind, horizontal rain) and within sight of the Cairngorm glens (wildness, remotest region of Europe), Dundee has an immediate relation to its natural landscape that is unique amongst UK cities. City and University have a longstanding partnership that supports a program of creative culture that includes the procurement of Dundee Contemporary Arts (the DCA) and the V&A Museum Dundee (opened September 2018). In 2014 Dundee was inducted into the UNESCO Creative Cities Network as a UNESCO City of Design.

The Matthew Building

Home of the Architecture + Urban Planning Programme at the University of Dundee and Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art and Design (DJ CAD), the Matthew Building was designed by James Paul, of Baxter Clark & Paul, who was Professor of Architecture at the University of Dundee. The building was completed in 1974. It is regarded as 'a significant example of Brutalist architecture in Scotland' by Historic Environment Scotland. With its heroically narrow atria, and the way it slides out of the hillside onto Perth Road as if it were a geological formation, it has both the strength and fragility of a Paul Rudolf building. It so could have been otherwise.

Keynote Speakers

Martino Tattara is a founding partner in the architecture practice Dogma, and Assistant Professor at KU Leuven Faculty of Architecture. After graduating from the Università Iuav di Venezia, he obtained a postgraduate Masters degree at the Berlage Institute in Rotterdam and a PhD in Urbanism at the Università Iuav di Venezia with a dissertation centred on Lucio Costa's project for Brasilia. He has taught at the Berlage Institute in Rotterdam (2006-2012) and was the head of research and teaching at ETH/Studio Basel (2012-2015). Dogma has exhibited at the Tallinn Architectural Biennale 2014, the HKW Berlin 2015, the Biennale di Venezia 2016, and Chicago Architectural Biennial 2017. His forthcoming book is titled Living and Working.

Joan Ockman is an architectural historian, critic, and educator. She is currently Distinguished Senior Research Fellow at University of Pennsylvania School of Design. She served as Director of the Buell Center for the Study of American Architecture at Columbia University from 1994 to 2008 and was on the faculty of Columbia's Graduate School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation for over two decades. She has also held teaching appointments at Cooper Union, Cornell, Harvard, Yale, and the Berlage Institute. Her book publications include Architecture School: Three Centuries of Educating Architects in North America (2012), Architourism (2005), Out of Ground Zero (2002), The Pragmatist Imagination (2000), and the award-winning anthology Architecture Culture 1943-1968 (1993).

Reinier de Graaf is a Dutch architect and writer. He is a partner in the Office for Metropolitan Architecture (OMA), where he leads projects in Europe, Russia and the Middle East. His recent built work includes the Timmerhuis, a mixed-use project in Rotterdam widely recognized for its innovation in ways of working and living, sustainability and cost efficiency; and De Rotterdam, currently the largest building in the Netherlands. Reinier is the co-founder of OMA's think tank AMO and Sir Arthur Marshall Visiting Professor of Urban Design at the Department of Architecture of the University of Cambridge. His book Four Walls and a Roof: The Complex Nature of a Simple Profession was named best book of 2017 by the Financial Times and the Guardian.

Jodi Dean is Professor of Political Science at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, New York. She is the author of numerous books including, Democracy and Other Neoliberal Fantasies (Duke 2009), The Communist Horizon (Verso 2012), Crowds and Party (Verso 2016) and forthcoming from Verso, Comrade: An essay on political belonging. Dean has made contributions to political theory, media studies, and third-wave feminism, most notably with her theory of communicative capitalism—the online merging of democracy and capitalism into a single neoliberal formation that subverts the democratic impulses of the masses by valuing emotional expression over logical discourse.

Field trips

Claypotts Castle

Built in the 1580s, Claypotts Castle is one of the best preserved examples of a 16th Century Z-plan tower house in Scotland.
Matthew Building Lobby Thursday 10:00am

Architecture Walking Tour of Dundee

A student-led tour of the buildings and special sites in Dundee, including Gardyne's Land (1560s, the oldest fragment in Dundee), the 19th century mill buildings, McManus Galleries, and the new waterfront. The tour is weather dependent. Matthew Building Lobby Thursday 10:00am

By Weeds We Live

A guided walk and tasting session of plants, normally considered weeds, taking inspiration from Geddes's intriguing maxim 'by leaves we live'. Led by the community arts group, Deveron Projects. Returns in time for the first round table discussion. Matthew Building Lobby Thursday 1:45pm

D'Arcy Thompson Zoological Museum

The unique collection of specimens collected by Sir D'Arcy Wentworth Thompson, the first Professor of Biology at Dundee and author of On Growth and Form (1917). Curator Matthew Jarron. Carnelley Building Thursday 1-2:00pm & Friday 6:30-9:00pm

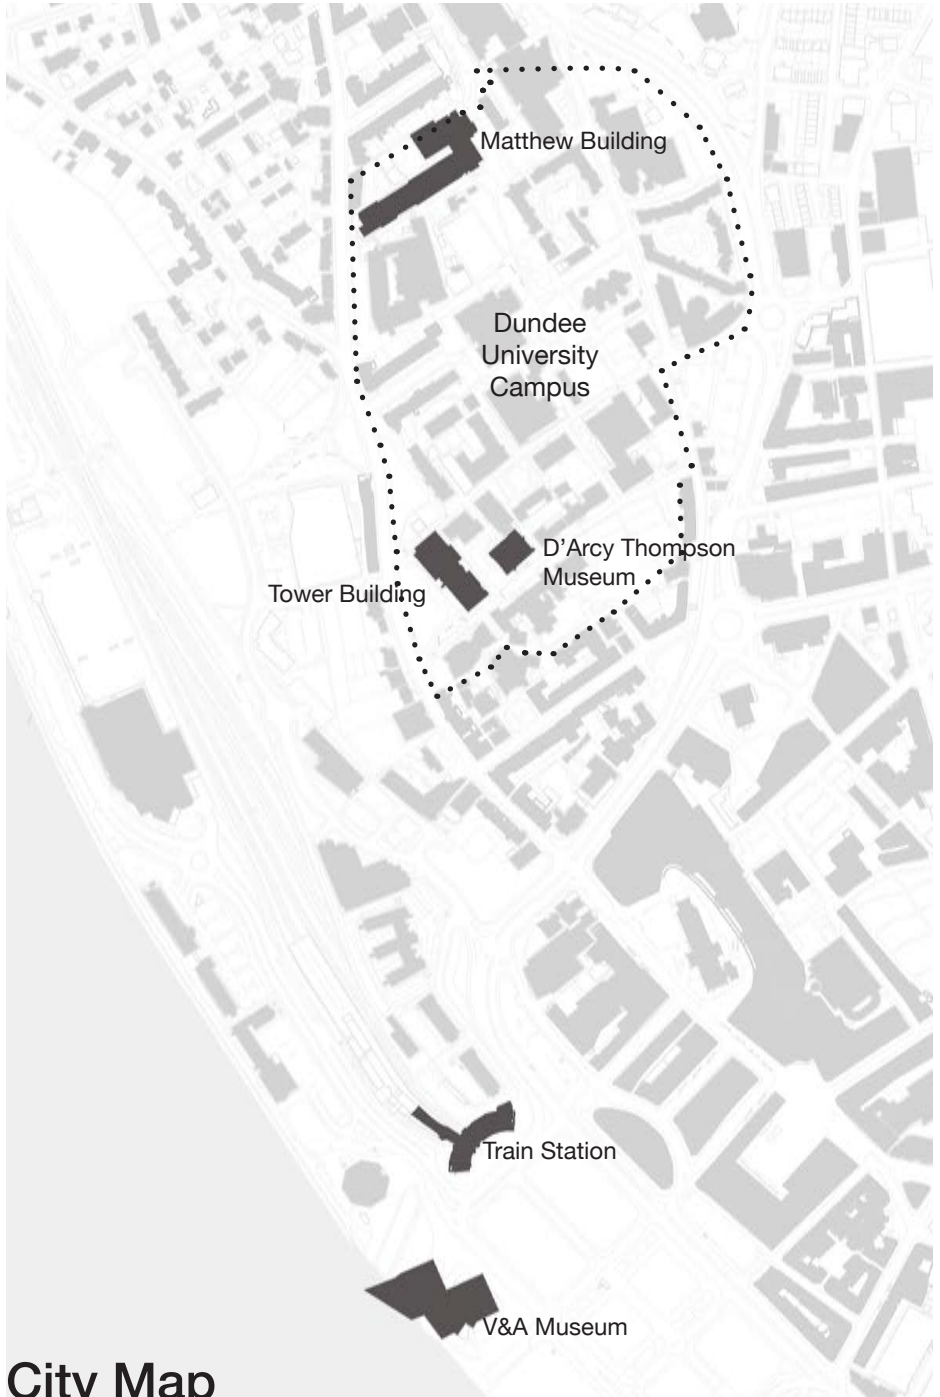

The Dundee Docklands

Forth Ports Dundee is one of the largest economic generators in the City of Dundee and the Tayside region of eastern Scotland. It is one of the maintenance facilities for North Sea oil rigs. Forth Ports is the remaining heavy industry in Dundee. Matthew Building Lobby Thursday 10:00am

Please register for field trips with our University Shop (£2). Spaces are limited and will be allocated on a first come first serve basis.
